KundenrezensionenHilfreichste Kundenrezensionen0 von 0 Kunden fanden die folgende Rezension hilfreich. Professor in your pocketVon D. BrownThis guide is worth it's weight in gold. What it lacks in glossy pictures it more than makes up for in deep background information about the art and history of the places you'll see. For Santorini it's especially valuable to get off the beaten track and escape from the crowds of cruise ship vacationers and people who just sit on the beach drinking beer under an umbrella. There is amazing history to see on the island, and this book will guide you to it and help you appreciate it.The author is a professor of art history with good taste and experience traveling in the greek islands. He doesn't spend a lot of time discussing logistics (you can get that from most of the other travel books) but the restaurants he recommends are indeed excellent. We got a lot more value out of this small book than we did from the larger and more colorful books that attempt to cover all of the greek islands. Those general guides are a great survey to help you choose where to go. Once you're on the island, this guide is a far better reference for what to do while you're there.

Kurzbeschreibung Kos has a wide and spacious feel. It holds an astonishing variety of remains from all periods of its long and important history. The town's skyline is exotically punctuated by minarets left by the Ottoman occupation and giant palm-trees left by the Italians. The most famous medical centre of Later Antiquity, in memory of Hippocrates whose name is inseparable from the island, lies close to the town and the island also has a large number of Early Christian churches. Nisyros is the most significant volcano in the Aegean after Santorini: its circular perimeter, deep central crater, rich dark earth and several hot springs leave no doubt as to its recent geological origins. The bubbling fumaroles, vapour seams and sulphurous efflorescences of the different craters are fascinating to expert and amateur alike. Pserimos is naturally one of the most tranquil corners of the Dodecanese, with a beautiful coastline and an undisturbed landscape of rocks and herbs and goats.
